SOLVING POVERTY

- Positive thinking and progressive individuals across the globe with vested interest in productive, development and peaceful nations
- Founded on truth and fairness with the intent to achieving better nations with integrity within developing counties.
- Most developing nations wallow in serious but solvable problems-: corruption, money laundering, assassinations, armed robbery, poverty, drug peddling, human trafficking, conflicts and illiteracy.

Thus, for these problems to be reduced and/or completely eradicated, something must be done urgently:

By creating awareness on developing nation's problems and By seeking support for them from local and foreign nations

To drum up support from countries all over the world, to support the human right activism and to abolish poverty in every society in the entire world

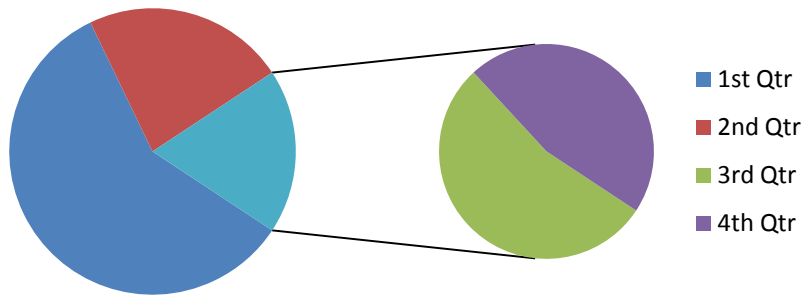

something must be done Continue

Formulate the possible causes, create options, select the most feasible option, and then implement it.

To fully emancipate developing country with the same rights and opportunities as developed counties.

solution

something must be done Continue

To assist foreigners living abroad, and to promote peace among nations through inter cultural exchange, friendship and love devoid of fraud

To encourage poor people in areas of education, farming, information technology etc, so that they can be self employed

something must be done Continue

To see the full transformation of so called third world countries into a technologically developed world with reduced poverty level, crime and conflicts.

To achieve better nations with integrity and to fully emancipate of nation especially those in rural areas

LETs GO BACK TO HISTORY

For decade the systematic of the western counties to help, has no effect on solving African problems, because of collaboration between the western government and corrupt African government, with selfishness and corrupt bureaucracies of NGO

The Organization for Economic Corporation and Development (OECD) countries has pumped an estimated $640 billion to Sub Sahara African countries since 1960.

The G8 countries committed $60 billion towards fighting diseases and lately China has dedicated $5 billion in the next three years to Africa.

Clearly, money alone does not solve problems. What is needed instead are business, social, and political entrepreneurs who take responsibility for, say, making sure medicines reach victims, rather than more grandiose slogans about comprehensive administrative solutions that only serve as publicity vehicles for raising yet more money for ineffectual aid bureaucracies.

But only if the money comes as investment, Africa doesn't need aid from governments and international agencies. Over the last 40 years, aid to developing countries has reached $2.6 trillion, 25% of which has gone to sub-Saharan Africa. It has notably failed to eliminate poverty.

Finally, those of in developed countries can also give direct aid to developing countries by purchasing developing countries products. And if rich countries want to further help developing countries, they can issue vouchers to their own citizens to encourage the purchase of developing countries goods in Western stores and also to purchase African food at Kimito Kitchen.

SILTASAARI LEHTI

Kuten Pitkäsillan pohjoispuolelle asettuneet etniset kaupungit osoittavat, eivät Afrikka ja Kemiökään ole niin kaukana toisistaan kartalta katsottuna: ”Kemiön perinneruoka, protto, pitää sisällään aika lailla samoja raaka-aineita kuin Nigerian asaro”, Lindström summaa
